To Release Farm Output Estimate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture department will make its final estimate of the year to-morrow on output of American's farms for 1957 and in spite of unusually wet fall weather, the report probably will show farm crops at or near record totals.

It is likely the last general crop report of the year will show a reduction in output for some crops compared with the November estimate, because of cool, wet weather which stalled some harvests.

However, the over-all estimate for the 1957 crop year is expected to be close to or equal to any previous year.

The cotton crop has suffered from unfavorable weather in late season, and harvesting of corn and sorghum grains has been especially hard hit in some midwestern areas because of excessive rains.

In spite of these weather conditions, record output totals are expected for feed grains, including corn, sorghum grain, oats and barley.

Winter wheat conditions in plains states are rated excellent because of favorable early growth and above normal rainfall.

French President Invited to U. S.

PARIS (AP) — President Eisenhower has renewed his invitation to President Coty of France to visit Washington a White House spokesman said today.

Coty has indicated willingness to accept the invitation, but no date has been set.

Coty had planned to visit Washington last June. The trip was postponed because of the fall of the government of Premier Guy Mollet.

Long St. Lawrence Canal Nearly Ready

WASHINGTON (UP) — The Long Sault Canal, a 10-mile-long ditch in the International Rapids section of the St. Lawrence River, near Massena, N. Y., is nearly completed, the St. Lawrence Seaway Development Corp. announced today.

A statement from the corporation said the eight-million-dollar canal, the major United States link in the seaway, will be ready for ships of 14-foot draft early next July and for 27 footers in the spring of 1959.

Only about 90,000 cubic yards of excavation remains to be done of the contracted total of 17 million cubic yards.

Aged Elephant to Be Destroyed

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Another effort to get Ararat, the four-ton elephant at the Swope Park zoo, on her feet failed again today.

As a result zoo director William T. A. Cully said the aged pachyderm will have to be destroyed. He said the infirmities of old age had caught up with Ararat, believed to be between 60 and 70 years old.

After a pulley was reched from the wall in the elephant stall, Ararat surprised everyone by getting on her knees unaided. But she could not regain her feet and collapsed heavily on the floor.

Contractors, Workers Stall in Talks

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Negotiations between contractors and union representatives some 3,000 construction workers in central Arkansas apparently have stalled with the contract deadline only two weeks away.

A union spokesman yesterday said that a strike probably would be called if agreements are not reached by Dec. 31, the expiration date of contracts for crafts.

J. B. Dodds, who represents Carpenters Local 690, Iron Workers Local 921 and Construction and Laborers Local 1281, said no progress had been made in six weeks of negotiations with Associated General Contractors.

Alfred W. Fulton, representative of the Plasterers and Cement Finishers Union, could not be reached for comment.

Attorney William J. Smith, representing the AGC, said he expected negotiations to be resumed this week. He said contractors were bargaining with the unions on an individual basis.

The unions are seeking a graduated scale which, in effect, would be a 50-cent per hour increase over a 12-month period. Dodds said carpenters and iron workers draw about $3 per hour and laborers about $1.35.

Subways Step Up Operations Despite Strike

NEW YORK (AP) — The city's subways stepped up operations to 80 per cent of normal during the morning rush hour today as the strike by motormen and other transit employees entered its second week.

The authority shifted motormen among the divisions to improve service on the lines serving Brooklyn and Queens, which have been most affected since the strike began.

The striking motormen prepared to take formal action on Mayor Robert F. Wagner's back-to-work proposal.

Small Lead in $18,000 Burglary

CLARKSVILLE (AP) — Sheriff Robert Hardwicke yesterday said he had "one small lead" in the investigation of an $18,000 burglary of a combination service station, grocery and restaurant.

Hardwicke said the thieves entered a restroom at the Ray Brothers Service Station, pried open a window and slipped open the underside of a safe.

The owners of the business, Horshell and Burlin Ray discovered the burglary early 5 a.m. They had closed at 9 p. m. Saturday night.

Mills Asks New Approach to Farm Problems

By GORDON BROWN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16 (AP) — Arkansas' Rep. Wilbur Mills (D), an increasingly important voice in the House, has raised the significant question of whether it isn't time for a new approach to the farm problem on the ground that present programs aren't satisfactorily solving farm ills.

Mills pointed to what he termed the need for a new direction in farm policy in a recent talk to the national convention of the American Farm Bureau Federation in Chicago.

He challenged farm groups and organizations to begin work on a new approach, asserting it is first and foremost the responsibility of farmers—not Washington—to work out some new solution.

Mills reported he found much agreement—and no disagreement—at the Chicago meeting.

Mills said he believed most farmers will agree that the present farm programs—price supports, acreage controls, soil bank, exports of surplus and the like—really aren't solving the farm problem.

Insists U. S. Hasn't Lost Advantage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Nixon said today the United States has not "lost the over-all advantage which we have enjoyed, do enjoy and will continue to enjoy for some time in the future."

Nixon was the opening speaker at a seminar held by the Air Force Assn. for several hundred Washington newsmen on the subject of missiles and satellites.

The vice president said the initial reaction to Russia's Sputnik launchings was divided between "great pessimism" on one side and "the feeling that we could go along as usual" on the other. He said what is needed is "a good dose of realism."

The question of increased defense spending has arisen, Nixon said, adding that "we can spend all we need to spend for national defense" but we should spend only as national defense needs indicate.

"If we give blank checks, we can wind up with rubber checks," the vice president said.

Nixon said he recently read an article saying the Russians are ahead in missiles with a range to 900 to 1,000 miles while the United States is ahead in the 1,500-to-2,000-mile range.

He said that in the hands of the Russians a 900-mile range missile would be "as adequate as a 1,500-to-2,000-mile missile in the hands of the free world—they could do the same job with the shorter range missile. His reference apparently was to the probable location of NATO missile bases much farther back from the East-West frontier than Soviet bases.

New Atlas Test Likely to Come at Any Moment

By VERN HAUGLAND

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — An attempt to launch the Atlas intercontinental ballistic missile has been postponed, possibly until Tuesday.

Scattered groups of watchers on the beach disappeared as the postponement of firing became evident.

By VERN HAUGLAND
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The countdown that precedes a missile launching reportedly was under way today, preparatory to the test firing of America's Atlas intercontinental ballistic weapon.

There was no official word that the third attempt to launch an Atlas might be in progress.

The Atlas normally requires a countdown of about 10 hours. However, there is no strict timetable.

Watchers from benches four to five miles away from the heavily guarded launching area noted great activity around the Atlas stands, where men worked under floodlights through the night.

Two of the giant missiles were visible in their stands. These may be the ones which were given static tests last week.

In addition to the firing expected today, another Atlas launching is believed likely toward the end of the week.

Two previous test launchings of the Atlas were held last summer and last fall.

In both instances the missile got into the air. Before it could get fully under way, however, it started to wobble and change course and had to be blown apart.

The Atlas is designed to deliver a hydrogen warhead over an arc reaching as high as 600 miles above the earth to a target 5,000 miles or more from its launching point. Its average speed is 10,000 miles an hour.

In a test launching, however, the main purpose is to check the functioning of the various parts. The missile may be pre-set for a lesser altitude and a shorter range for better observation of its flight.

Although construction details are secret, the Atlas is believed to be about 70 feet long and 8 feet in diameter and to weigh some 100 tons at takeoff.

It consists of three stages and is powered by three rocket engines.

The main Atlas engine is believed to have a thrust of 135,000 pounds and the two booster engines are estimated at 100,000 pounds thrust each. The fuel consists of kerosene mixed with liquid oxygen.

The Atlas uses a complex ground-based radio-inertial guidance system and has inertial gyroscopes elements aboard to keep it on course during any temporary loss of ground guidance.

The operational missile that is used in combat, the nose cone contains, among other things, an atomic warhead and provision for arming and fusing.

The Atlas, which requires electric power to operate its guidance and control systems, is launched vertically in order to reduce the time spent close to the ground during takeoff, and because it is easier to build equipment to launch heavy vehicles vertically.

After its initial vertical climb the missile goes into a "programmed" turn toward the target. It is during this turn that the guidance system begins to function and continues to do so until the desired altitude, speed and angle are attained. Then a signal cuts off the propulsive power.

When power is no longer available, less than 10 minutes after takeoff, the missile goes into its free flight or ballistic trajectory, and can no longer be influenced, guided or controlled.

Will Study Subsidy for Science Plan

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Preparedness subcommittee will take up the question of federal subsidies for scientific education before it ends its inquiry into the missiles program.

This was disclosed today by Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex.) the subcommittee chairman. Johnson, Senate Democratic leader, already has said publicly he believes some form of federal aid should be made available for training scientists needed in the defense program.

He told reporters that when the subcommittee sits down to write a report on its investigation of the missile and satellite programs he will ask Chairman Hill (D-Ala.) of the Senate Labor and Welfare Committee to sit in on discussions of educational problems.

"We expect to turn over to the Labor Committee the job of acting as it sees fit on a scientific educational program after it has had the benefit of our inquiries into this matter," Johnson said. Johnson is understood to be thinking in terms of legislation which would parallel that under which agricultural vocational teachers have been trained.

Can't Compel Building Road Across Dam

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Arkansas Supreme Court ruled today that a group of Baxter County residents could not compel the Highway Commission to build a highway across Norfolk Dam.

In 1943 the state received $1,422,000 from the federal government as compensation for flooding of parts of Highways 62 and 101 in construction of Norfolk Reservoir.

The Highway Commission contended that it had used the damage award in installation and operation of a ferry to replace the inundated roads.

Associate Justice Paul Ward for the court that construction and routing of highways are a matter of discretion with the commission. The opinion also cited the presence of a rock bluff which would make construction of a highway extremely difficult and expensive.

In a separate concurring opinion, Associate Justice Ed F. McFaddin held that a suit of the Baxter County residents actually was a suit against the state and therefore unconstitutional.

Life a Day on Highways in Arkansas

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
One life per day was the toll on Arkansas highways last week but that rate represented a slight decline from the past few weeks.

Seven persons died in traffic accidents, but four shootings — accidental and otherwise — and a mine explosion which took four lives boosted the violent death toll to 19 for the week which ended at midnight Sunday.

Lucille Works, a 25-year-old Negro woman from Dallas, Tex., was killed late Sunday in an automobile accident two miles east of Goodwin, Ark., on U.S. Highway 70.

State police said the woman was riding in a car driven by Matthew Larry, 25, also a Dallas Negro, which smashed into the rear of an auto driven by John Henry Johnson, 21, Negro, of Hillman, Ark.

Trio of Fast Change Artists Jailed Here

Three fast change artists were arrested here Saturday by City Police after they had taken about $30 in cash from a couple of local establishments and failed a couple of others, City Police said.

They were listed as Arthur Herbert Bell, Ray Biggers and Doris M. Biggers, all of Ft. Worth, Tex. City Officers said today they were notified the trio had a long police record in Texas.

The first places hit were Dean's Truck Stop and Oaks Cafe. They tried it at White's Cafe where Bud White became suspicious and called police. Officers arrested the trio at the Cottage Drive-In a short time later.

They were to be charged with obtaining money under false pretense in Municipal Court Monday.

Few Ask Delay in Basing Arms in Europe

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

PARIS (AP) — President Eisenhower called on the Atlantic Alliance today for heroic efforts to build its military strength in the missile race with Russia "while the margin of power is still ours."

He immediately ran into demands from some other NATO leaders to postpone a final decision on basing nuclear rockets in Europe.

A disagreement over quick action on NATO missiles bases and atomic stockpiles appeared to be developing at the very outset of the historic summit conference, to rally the resources of the Western coalition.

The conference opened with a brief public session at noon, at which Eisenhower spoke. It went into a closed working session in midafternoon, but statements of government heads were made.

German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer backed the U.S. principle that in Adenauer's words — NATO should be equipped "with advanced weapons equalling those of our potential enemy." Yet Adenauer said all military questions here need "very thorough study" with a decision put off until next spring.

Premier Einar Gerhardsen of Norway informed the conference that his country has "no plans now" to let stockpiles be established on Norwegian territory or to construct launching sites for intermediate range ballistic missiles.

Gerhardsen said that if necessary a solution to disarmament must be sought through direct diplomatic negotiations between the two principal military powers. This was a clear suggestion for American Russian talks something the European Allies have always shied at heretofore.

The Norwegian Premier said the right course would be for NATO to postpone a decision on rocket bases in Europe.

But NATO's civilian chief, Belgium's Paul-Henri Spaak, lent powerful support to President Eisenhower. He called on all 15 members of the Alliance to arm themselves with the most modern nuclear weapons and said failure to do so would leave the Soviet

CHAPTER XXV

There was silence for a moment. Then I said gently, "Honey, I told you before—you're asking for trouble."

She said coolly, "What's wrong with saying goodbye to a friend, even if he is married. Besides, I have something of Wayne's. Something I want to return. A pair of binoculars he loaned me."

"Forget it," I said. "You can give me the binoculars. I'll see that he gets them."

When she spoke again she didn't look at either Howell or me and her voice was low and not quite so controlled. "I've got to see him. I can't let him go away without a word from me. I—"

And then Hugo Howell did a strange thing. He reached out and touched Honey's hand. "Ma'am, I'm off base, but I wish my son had picked you, my dear. But it's too late now." His rasping voice sounded softer than I'd ever heard it.

Honey gave him a fleeting smile. "Thank you, Mr. Howell." Then she stood abruptly, picked up the purse, walked out the street entrance.

The thin waitress came over with an inquiring expression.

Howell ordered more rye. I told her to bring me the pickerel dinner and suggested to Howell that he order some food, too. But he just shook his head silently. My dinner arrived presently and he had more whisky while I ate. By the time I'd finished my coffee there was a bright, wicked gleam in his eyes and he was beginning to slur his words. "Take it easy," I warned.

Then Otto came out of the kitchen, buttoning his white jacket. I heard Thelma say viciously, "It's about time."

"Sorry, Thelma," Otto said. "I overslept. I'll work for you tomorrow." He smiled at her.

"You'd better," she snapped, and flounced away.

Howell sneered. "What kind of hours does he work anyhow? He's here and he ain't here. I think I'll ave a few words with him." He started to get out of the booth.

I stopped him with a hand on his arm. "Sit down. You've caused enough trouble in here."

He shook off my hand and lurched out of the booth. I grabbed for him, missed, and he moved unsteadily to the bar, carrying his glass. I saw Otto's lips tighten, but there was nothing but polite inquiry in his expression.

Howell said something in a low voice. Otto turned away, ignoring him, his face impassive. As I started to get out of the booth, Howell threw his glass at the bartender. Otto ducked and the glass crashed into the tier of bottles behind the bar. Howell laughed loudly and came lurching back toward the booth, a wild gleam in his eyes. All around the room people were buzzing angrily.

The manager came running in from the lobby, his face pink with anger. He stopped and stared aghast at the wreckage back of the bar. The waitress silently pointed a finger at Howell. The manager went up to him. "I've had quite enough of you. I want you to pay your bill and leave this hotel immediately. Immediately." He almost stamped his foot.

Howell placed a palm on the manager's chest and pushed him violently backward. The manager crashed against a table and almost fell. Women screamed. "Call the police!"

I started to rthe phone on the bar, but just as I did so, Gus, the young policeman, came in from the street, his face grim. I jerked a thumb at Howell. "You are just in time. Better look him up."

By this time people were milling around and two men were trying to restrain Howell, who was struggling and shouting. The manager danced on the perimeter of the scuffle screaming, "We can't have this!" Otto stood quietly behind the bar watching the scene.

Except for a cold gleam in his pale eyes, his face was as stolid as an Indian's.

Gus spoke sharply to the men struggling with Howell. "Let him go."

The men released Howell and stepped back, panting. Howell stood weaving, his face contorted in a kind of grin. Gus said sternly, "You're under arrest," and reached out to take Howell's arm.

Howell jerked his arm away and shook his head. "No, I ain't going with you."

I said to Howell, "You'd better go with him."

"Shut up," he said, without looking at me. Who asked you to mix in?" He reached backward, lifted a beer bottle from a table, and hefted it by the neck while beer foamed over his trousers.

Gus' right hand moved to the flap of his revolver holster. I moved then. Howell was still my client, and I didn't want to see him shot. In the second place I wanted him off my hands for the evening. I had other plans, and they did not include playing

Clemency Granted to Hickinbothams

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Gov. Orval Faubus has granted executive clemency to J. H. and H. V. Hickinbotham, father and son grocers who faced 60-day jail sentences each and $6,000 in fines for violating a court order forbidding them to operate their store on Sunday.

The senior Hickinbotham, 63, had said he and his 37-year-old son could not pay the fines and probably would have to serve nursemaid. So I stepped in fast, before he had a chance to swing the bottle, and before Gus could draw his gun. I almost hated to hit him. Almost, but not quite. I swung a right, hard and short, to the side of Howell's beefy jaw, and there was a satisfying knuckle jar. He staggered against a table and the beer bottle rolled over the floor. Gus moved fast then, his hand switching from the holster to the handcuffs on his belt. In less than a second the groggy Howell was manacled and Gus was half dragging him to the street door. I followed, and as the three of us went out there came from the bar the sound of applause.

Union with a nuclear monopoly in Europe.

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

PARIS (U)—In a bid to reassert strong American leadership, President Eisenhower told the Atlantic Alliance today that new forces are beginning to "cast a pall over our world."

He called for heroic efforts to match Russia's space-age military challenge "while the margin of power is still ours."

Eisenhower couched his grim, but apparently confident demand for action with a declaration that the United States and its allies stand ready to join Russia in an effort to bring the forces threatening the world "under rational control." But until that can be done, the Allies must employ their strength "to sustain peace and freedom."

"The forces arrayed against us are formidable but not irresistible," Eisenhower declared to the first heads-of-government session to be held by the eight-year-old North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Takes 13 Years But He Wins One

SANFORD, Fla. (UP)—It took Walter Burkemo 13 years as a professional golfer to win a PGA medal play tournament, the $15,000 Sanford Open.

Burkemo, the Franklin Hills, Mich., pro who is a feared rival in man-to-man match play, "beat the scoreboard" and two stout contenders as he posted a 269 for 72 holes for a one-stroke victory Sunday.

The two contenders, home pro Jay Hobert and Ed (Porky) Oliver of Canton, Miss., finished in a second-place tie at 270.

Tied for fourth money at 274 were Al Balding, young Canadian playing out of Miami Beach, and Art Doering of Fox Chapel, Pa. Next at 275 came Bo Wininger, Odessa, Tex.; Tony Lema, Elko, Nev.; Dow Flinsderwald, Tuguesia, Fla., and Marly Furgol, Lemont, Ill.

Reform - Do Not Try to Get Your Wife Back On a Promise

Dear Dorothy Dix: Eight months ago my wife left me, and filed for divorce. I love her and my two children very much and would like some advice on how to win her back. My drinking was the cause of our separation, but I've promised that if she would give me another chance I would quit.

PETE

Dear Pete: How often did you make the same promise before the separation? Have you made any attempt to stop drinking, or are you still promising?

I can't suggest any way of getting your wife back except to stop drinking. It's too late for idle promises; only action will count now and it may even be too late for that. If your wife led the typical life as the mate of a drunkard she has had her fill of promises and has lost all love and respect for you.

Offer her six months of non-drinking, and for the sake of the children she may come back - after you've reformed.

Dear Dorothy Dix: When a man decides to marry a girl is he expecting too much to want a girl who has never petted?

MERE MAN

Dear Mere Man: There is such a girl? It depends on whether or not the man has been a petter. If he has made every girl he dated pay for the evening with a kiss, what right has he to demand that the girl he marries be unlicked?

Dear Dorothy Dix: Five years ago my wife asked for a divorce because she was in love with another man. I agreed to it, and also gave her custody of our teen-ager son. A year ago I remarried. Now, my first wife is back on the scene, having been deserted by her lover (who didn't marry her). She wants me to come back to her for the sake of our son, who is now in CAHORS, France (UP)—Author Françoise Sagan, 21, will marry Guy Schoeller, 45, year old divorcee who is a director of a Paris publishing firm. Banns for the marriage were posted Sunday in Miss Sagan's birthplace at Cahors near here, where her Jewish father has a summer home. BAGHDAD (P)—Abdul Wahab Mirjan formally took over as Iraq's new premier Sunday and service.

N. O.

Dear N. O.: She wants you back because she needs a meal ticket. If she wasn't concerned about her son when he was 13, she isn't now that he's reached the age where he can look out for himself. Don't fall for her miked-up reasoning.

Dear Dorothy Dix: My husband is a heavy drinker and since we don't have much money, has taken to drinking rubbing alcohol. What can I do?

MYRTLE

Dear Myrtle: Keep a bunch of emergency telephone numbers handy - the hospital, the doctor and the undertaker.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Do you think it is right for a girl to take away her best friend's date? NATALIE

Dear Natalie: It's the survival of the fittest you know, and in this world it's also every man for himself. This may not be the ethical thing to do but it's more or less natural.

Section 8. That the provisions of this ordinance are separable and in the event that any section or part thereof shall be held to be invalid, such invalidity shall not affect the remainder of the ordinance.

Section 9. Fire Destroys 3 Osceola Buildings

OSCEOLA, Ark. (AP)—A fire which was believed extinguished 24 hours earlier broke out for the second time last night and destroyed three businesses in a downtown Osceola.

The fire was first discovered Saturday night in the kitchen of the Hut Cafe. It caused considerable damage.

Firemen fought the blaze for three hours before leaving the scene.

The fire broke out again last night and destroyed the cafe, a drug store, a billiard parlor and a vacant office.

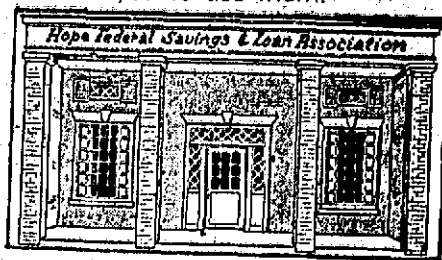

R. W. Reidy, owner of the drug store, said damage to his business would be about $95,000.

About one tenth of the U. S. Lumber supply comes from the national forests.
